

THE IMPACT OF MANDATORY TRANSFER STATUTES

Each year, 200,000 youth come in contact with the adult criminal justice system. Many of these youth are automatically treated as adults under legislative mandatory transfer statutes. These statutes identify specific offenses that require juvenile court judges to transfer a youth to adult court after a finding of probable cause (mandatory waiver to adult court) or result in youth having their cases automatically start in adult court (statutory exclusion from juvenile court).

WHAT IS MANDATORY TRANSFER?

- Mandatory transfer is a type of transfer provision that requires the automatic transfer of juveniles to criminal court for certain offenses.
- While mandatory transfer is limited by offense and sometimes by age, mandatory transfer statutes vary by state and some allow kids as young as 13 to be automatically transferred.¹
- These laws are largely a result of the myth of the juvenile super predator in the 1990s, which resulted in the adultification of youth and increased criminalization of youthful behavior in school and in communities.²

WHICH STATES HAVE MANDATORY TRANSFER STATUTES?

- In 2014, youth in 14 states were subject to mandatory waiver laws meaning juvenile court judges had to transfer the youth to adult court after a finding of probable cause.
 - States with mandatory waivers laws are: Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, New Jersey, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia.³
- In 2014, youth in 29 states were subject to statutory exclusion laws meaning youth were automatically tried in adult court for certain offenses which excluded them from the juvenile courts jurisdiction.
 - States with statutory exclusions laws are: Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, and Wisconsin

WHAT IMPACT DOES IT HAVE?

- Youth who are sentenced to adult facilities are 36 times more likely to commit suicide, and to be victims of physical and emotional abuse such as sexual assault.⁴
- Youth prosecuted in the adult system are 34% more likely to recidivate and with more violent offenses.⁵
- Mandatory transfer statutes tie the hands of judges. They prohibit consideration of individual circumstances relating to the offense or the offender before the youth is treated as an adult.

¹ https://www.ojdp.gov/pubs/reform/ch2_j.html

² <https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/ojdp/232434.pdf>

³ <http://www.jigps.org/jurisdictional-boundaries>

⁴ http://www.campaignforyouthjustice.org/images/policybriefs/policyreform/FR_YACJS_2012.pdf

⁵ <http://static.nicic.gov/Library/025555.pdf>

WHY STATES SHOULD REPEAL MANDATORY TRANSFER STATUTES?

Mandatory Schemes are Under Increased Scrutiny by Courts

- Mandatory transfer statutes are harmful. Like mandatory life without parole and other mandatory minimum sentences, these statutes do not allow juvenile court judges who are in the best position to assess the rehabilitative needs of youth to consider individualized factors to determine whether the severe consequence of treating a youth as an adult is appropriate.
- The U.S. Supreme Court's jurisprudence is moving toward a recognition that individualized review of a youth's history, the circumstances of the offense, and a youth's ability to change are critical to determining a youth's sentence.
 - "'An offender's age,' we made clear in Graham 'is relevant to the Eighth Amendment,' and so 'criminal procedure laws that fail to take defendants' youthfulness into account at all would be flawed.'" Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 11 (2012).
 - "We thought the mandatory scheme flawed because it gave no significance to 'the character and records of the individual offender or the circumstances' of the offense, and 'exclud[ed] from consideration the possibility of compassionate or mitigating factors.'" Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 13 (2012)
- In 2014, the Iowa Supreme Court struck down mandatory minimum sentences for juveniles as unconstitutional in State v. Lyle.
 - "[t]here is no other area of the law in which our laws write off children based only on a category of conduct without considering all background facts and circumstances."⁶

Mandatory Transfer Statutes take away a Court's ability to make individualized, appropriate, assessments of youth

- Juvenile court judges are trained and familiar with both the services available to youth in the juvenile system in their state and the developmental needs of youth for purposes of rehabilitation.
- Juvenile courts were created specifically to address the individualized needs of youth and in recognition that youth are different from adults.

Mandatory Transfer Statutes are not necessary to ensure youth who commit serious offenses and are a danger to themselves or the community are held accountable.

- Repealing mandatory transfer does not limit a state's ability to try and treat youth as adults who have committed serious offenses.
- 45 states already have transfer statutes that allow juvenile court judges to determine if a youth can or cannot be rehabilitated in the juvenile justice system.

⁶ State v. Lyle, Iowa Supreme Court, July 18, 2014, <http://eji.org/sites/default/files/andre-lyle-iowa-supreme-court-decision-07-18-14.pdf>